

Questions for “Ain’t I A Woman?”

Complete this on your iPad or a separate sheet, answering in 2+ sentences each.

1. What is the effect of repeating the rhetorical question, “Ain’t I a Woman?” throughout the speech?
2. To what does she compare women’s rights in paragraph three?
3. What analogy/rhetorical question does she use at the end of paragraph three? What is her point in making this comparison?
4. How does she refute the “Christ” argument in paragraph four? Why is this logical argument particularly strong?
5. What allusion does she make in paragraph five? How does she spin this reference, which usually puts women in a bad light, in her favor and use it to further her argument about the strength of women?

Questions for “Ain’t I A Woman?”

Complete this on your iPad or a separate sheet, answering in 2+ sentences each.

1. What is the effect of repeating the rhetorical question, “Ain’t I a Woman?” throughout the speech?
2. To what does she compare women’s rights in paragraph three?
3. What analogy/rhetorical question does she use at the end of paragraph three? What is her point in making this comparison?
4. How does she refute the “Christ” argument in paragraph four? Why is this logical argument particularly strong?
5. What allusion does she make in paragraph five? How does she spin this reference, which usually puts women in a bad light, in her favor and use it to further her argument about the strength of women?

Questions for “Ain’t I A Woman?”

Complete this on your iPad or a separate sheet, answering in 2+ sentences each.

1. What is the effect of repeating the rhetorical question, “Ain’t I a Woman?” throughout the speech?
2. To what does she compare women’s rights in paragraph three?
3. What analogy/rhetorical question does she use at the end of paragraph three? What is her point in making this comparison?
4. How does she refute the “Christ” argument in paragraph four? Why is this logical argument particularly strong?
5. What allusion does she make in paragraph five? How does she spin this reference, which usually puts women in a bad light, in her favor and use it to further her argument about the strength of women?